Seductive tales of women in space in second Full-Throttle Space Tales™ anthology

DENVER — Flying Pen Press announced the publication today of Space Sirens: Full Throttle Space Tales #2, edited by Carol Hightshoe.

Full-Throttle Space Tales™ is a series of anthologies featuring stories of vengeance, intrigue, and adventure across the depths of outer space. Space Sirens is the second book of the Full-Throttle Space Tales series and focuses on the theme of "Women in Space". With subjects ranging from serious explorations of the meaning of home to more light-hearted tales of madcap romance, the stories explore many different facets of this popular theme.

Established science fiction talents and rising star authors are both featured in this collection of all-new stories. Sarah A. Hoyt, author of the Shifter series, offers a tale of what happens when Homo Sapiens meets Homo Felis. Award winning author M. H. Bonham tells the story of Saraah, a pilot with more to deal with than just the plasma storms of a dying sun. And Miranda: Queen of Argyll series author Julia Phillips tells the story of a doctor struggling on the frontiers of space.

Carol Hightshoe is an author and editor who lives in Colorado. Her works include the novel Call of Chaos as well as numerous short stories. She also edits two web-based magazines: Sorcerous Signals, featuring stories of imagination and wonder, and The Lorelei Signal, dedicated to fantasy stories featuring strong female characters.
